

Speaker Profile – Neil Thubron

Neil is a high energy professional motivational speaker who combines the world of business with the world of extreme sports. His experience as a senior executive in a large US IT company, participation in extreme sporting events, including the Yukon Arctic Ultra and Marathon des Sables, is used to inspire people to achieve more in all aspects of their lives. Neil also uses the psychology of what motivates us, to help his audiences look beyond their current comfort zone.

In February 2015 Neil won the 300 mile Yukon Arctic Ultra foot race in temperatures down to -55 degrees centigrade, in a total time of 6 days and 19 hours. This event is one of the toughest on the planet and a great topic to lead with when talking about achieving big goals, overcoming hardship and having a driving focus.

Having learnt from achieving big goals personally and studying others that achieve big goals Neil has unlocked the "7 P Formula" for achieving any big goal. He takes his audiences through each step of this process reinforced with real life personal stories.

He has also competed in the Marathon Des Sables (250kms across the Sahara Desert), The Kalahari Extreme Marathon (250kms across the Kalahari Desert) and the Ultra Trail De Mont Blanc (a 100 mile non stop event round Mont Blanc ascending 9700m).

Neil is a professional speaker, a member of Toastmasters and the Professional Speakers Association, winner of several speaking competitions.

Inspire your audience to achieve big goals and learn from someone who has done this in one of the toughest places on the planet.
